

A Brief Comment on the Debate over BioCosmology

The debate on the relationship between cosmic, biological, and human personal-social processes is extremely important and timely. The key to relating these processes is evolution: progressive, irreversible change over time. The principles of what I have called "general evolution theory" (GET) apply to all evolutionary phenomena and all philosophical-cosmological traditions and currents. Bringing traditional and modern Russian and modern Western philosophy into the compass of this discussion constitutes an additional factor of interest.
